

BREXIT:

Be prepared for future trade.

As the transition period for Brexit comes to an end on 31st December supply chains will see many new restrictions in trade between the United Kingdom and EU.

Depending on the outcome of the final Brexit negotiations we may see considerably longer lead times for shipments to customers, additional costs for processing of customs documentation and quality and safety checks for goods at the borders.

Initially the UK Government withdrew customs easements such as Transitional Simplified Procedures (TSP) and Post VAT Accounting (PVA).

After reconsideration these may be re-instated to avoid chaos in the New Year.

Your Brexit partner

LGI can offer a wide range of warehousing and customs services at various sites throughout the UK and EU through its own entities.

Save on export costs for your returns e.g. from eCommerce sales in the UK by allowing LGI to consolidate shipments to your central warehouse in the UK and creating single rather than multiple customs declarations.

Guarantee short lead times to customers by having inventory stored at a UK and/or EU warehouse where LGI offers next day services for parcels and pallets to many regions.

Concentrate on your customers by letting LGI and its partners offer customs consultation services, customs clearance and export documentation services to enable you to continue trading in the UK and EU as in the past.
